I'm an illustrator and picture pilgrim.

Images normally bubble up first, the words often coming after.
Drawing has been the way to finding my words.

For me, pictures are a path of pilgrimage, a way to pencil myself into distant lands. Drawing is a way to tunnel inward, helping me find my way, constructing a personal mythology and cast of characters to send out on quests exploring the wilderness within and without.

My home is littered with prints, greeting cards, restaurant menus and heaps of books. And even though my phone is loaded down with digital ephemera—silly GIFs and cryptic strings of emojis—it seems to me that folks still seem drawn to the ritual of passing one another scraps of folded up paper.

We still enjoy standing before a wall of colorful rectangles punched with ready-made opening lines, in search of the bit of paper that will help us find the right words.

Delight & Disarm is my motto, and I hope my pictures, like friendly companions, help you on your own journey into the great wide world, and to finding the right words.

ABOUT

ABOUT Me

I live in Atlanta with my husband and our tabby cat, Markl.

When I'm not designing fun merch, I make illustrations for magazines, picture books, shop windows, sides of buildings and packaging.

I'm always reading two to three books at a time and would love to hear your podcast recommendations.

ABOUT Risograph

Risograph is a retro printing process that is kind to the planet. It's a low-energy, low waste method of printing using plant-made inks. Like a cross between screen printing and the mimeograph, it's a fusion of traditional, hand-made techniques with digital processes that creates one-of-a-kind prints. No two are alike.

ABOUT The Makers

All the products in this lookbook were produced in the USA by highly talented and passionate small businesses.
